" 22. Part ii of the Constitution enshrines the basic rights of the people under the heading 'Fundamental Rights' . This chapter contains Article 26 to Article 47A. Article 26 declares that to laws inconsistent with the fundamental rights are to be void. Article 32 provides for protection of right to life and persona liberty. Article 32 reads as follows:

" 32 No person shall be deprived of life or personal liberty save in accordance with law."

23. This declaration in the Constitution is not mere empty words. These guarantees are fundamental in nature, bestowed upon the people of Bangladesh by its Constitution. The expression "life" enshrined in Article 32 includes everything which is necessary to make it meaning and a 'life' worth living, such as, among others, maintenance of health is of utmost importance and preservation of environment and hygienic condition are of paramount importance for such maintenance of health, lack of which may put the 'life' of the citizen at naught. Naturally, if the lives to the inhabitants living around the concerned factories are in jeopardy, the application of article 32 becomes inevitable because not only a right to life but a meaningful life is an inalienable fundamental right of citizens this country."
